2022 Regular Session

Gregory Miller

Existing law (sunset law) provides a procedure for the periodic study and evaluation of statutory entities (including departments, agencies, and programs) by the standing committees of the legislature. Existing law requires each statutory entity being studied and evaluated to provide specified information to the appropriate standing committees.

New law further requires each statutory entity to provide to the appropriate standing committees the identity of each report the statutory entity is required by law to produce, including the citation of the law requiring the report, an estimate of the agency resources expended to produce the report, and the opinion of the agency regarding the continued necessity of the report.

Effective August 1, 2022.
