EXPENDITURE EXPLANATION

Proposed law will result in an indeterminable increase in expenditures if courts decide to increase the fees charged for court transcripts. Court transcript fees are charged as costs of the case. Once paid to the Clerk of Court, those fees are then paid to the court reporter.

For criminal indigent cases, many courts pay the transcript fees using Local Funds. To the extent judges decide to increase the fee for criminal indigent cases, there will be an increase in Local Fund expenditures. The exact fiscal impact to Local Funds revenue is indeterminable, because it is not known the number of cases that will be reported and transcribed, or the rates at which the majority of judges will choose to set the fees for transcription and reporting.

REVENUE EXPLANATION

Proposed law will likely result in an increase in revenue if courts decide to increase the fees charged for court transcripts. While some courts require fees to be paid directly to the court reporters, some Clerks of Court collect these fees and then remit them to the court reporter. In the circumstance where the Clerk of Court collects the fee, there will be an increase in Local Fund revenues.
