ACT 114 (HB 172)

2019 Regular Session

Pierre

New law provides for a training, registration, and certification process for fire-resistant material applicators.

New law provides that a fire-resistant material applicator is a person who applies fire-resistant material to a surface. New law requires that the fire-resistant material applicator obtain training in the application of fire-resistant material according to manufacturer recommendations. New law further requires fire-resistant material applicators to register with the state fire marshal's office.

New law requires the fire marshal to issue certificates to fire-resistant material applicators who have completed the required training and registered with the fire marshal.

New law establishes a fine of $250 per violation for any person applying fire-resistant material without being certified.

New law provides that implementation, including appellate procedures, and enforcement be pursuant to the Administrative Procedure Act.

Effective August 1, 2019.
