9         §1471.1. Homeowner's insurance; claims payments and settlements

10             No payment of a claim on a homeowner's insurance policy shall be 11             considered a final settlement if the insurer fails to provide the insured with a 12             statement that accurately reflects the amount paid under each category of coverage
 13             under the policy. The statement shall list each provision of coverage in the policy 14             under which the insured may be entitled to payment, the maximum amount that may 15             be paid under each category of coverage, and the amount actually included for 16             payment under each category of coverage. The statement shall be given to the 17             insured prior to the execution of a release by the insured."
