SB 180 Original

DIGEST
2018 Regular Session

Milkovich

Present law provides that, when a dispute arises as to the first request for authorization for a claimant's medical care, service, or treatment, the payor (i.e., the employer or the employer's workers' compensation insurer) will communicate to the claimant information, in plain language, regarding the procedure for requesting an additional medical opinion regarding a medical examination as to the condition of the employee or the employee's capacity to work and the procedure for appealing the denial of medical treatment to the medical director. Present law provides that a payor shall not deny medical care, service, or treatment to a claimant unless the payor can document a reasonable and diligent effort in communicating such information. Present law provides that a payor who denies medical care, service, or treatment without making such an effort may be fined an amount not to exceed $500 or the cost of the medical care, service, or treatment, whichever is more.

Proposed law retains present law but provides that, in addition to the remedies provided in present law, a payor who denies medical care, service, or treatment to a claimant without good cause shall be liable, in tort, for damages to the claimant when such unreasonable denial of medical care, service, or treatment causes the claimant an additional injury or the aggravation of an existing injury.

Proposed law provides that for purposes of proposed law, the term "payor", as it relates to a tort claim, shall not include an employer who has a valid workers' compensation insurance policy with a workers' compensation insurer. Proposed law provides that the workers' compensation insurance company, who actually made the decision to unreasonably deny medical treatment, shall be liable in tort but the employer, who did not make the decision, shall not be liable.

Effective August 1, 2018.
