EXPENDITURE EXPLANATION

There is no anticipated direct material effect on governmental expenditures as a result of this measure.

REVENUE EXPLANATION

There is no anticipated direct material effect on governmental revenues as a result of this measure. The proposed legislation lengthens timelines under which taxpayers may protest a local collector's determination of taxes due by 15 days, from 15 days to 30 days. Furthermore, the proposed law lengthens timelines for when a taxpayer may act upon a protested assessment, allowing them 60 days rather than 30 days to pay the assessment, pay under protest, or appeal to the Board of Tax Appeals for a redetermination of the assessment. The aforementioned adjustments may slightly lengthen timelines for receipt of tax revenues for local governmental units, but are not anticipated to significantly affect aggregate tax collections as a whole or for any particular fiscal years.
