Present law provides for registration of anyone who lobbies the legislature or any executive branch agency. Specifies information to be included on his registration: his name, business address, names of persons who pay him to lobby and the level of payments made, and the potential subject matter about which he lobbies.

Proposed law retains present law and requires the registrant to indicate whether he completed the annual training required pursuant to present law provisions of the Ethics Code for the previous calendar year.

Effective upon signature of the governor or lapse of time for gubernatorial action.
