Provides relative to legal representation of sovereign interests of the state

Current law provides the authority of the governor to require and direct the Attorney General (AG) to render assistance to any state governmental entities and political subdivisions to assume full charge and control of all legal proceedings relating to such matters; provides for the preservation and protection of powers reserved to the state by the 10th Amendment of the U.S. Constitution, by means of instituting suits in the name of the state. Proposed law advises on interests of the state in its sovereignty and in the AG preserving and defending its autonomy and independence in all legal matters and disputes involving the federal government and that the AG has the authority to institute, defend, or intervene in any suit to protect sovereign state interests; provides that the AG may represent the state and its entities, officials, and employees and any other institutions, and political subdivisions created by the Louisiana Constitution or state law, in order defend state interests; provides notice requirements by state entities to the governor and AG for any notices, claims, or demands made by a federal agency, agent, or official or any party in litigation seeking to impose continuing federal jurisdiction over any state entity; provides that neither the state nor any state entity may enter into a consent judgment in federal court without the AG or governor’s approval when the judgment creates or establishes continuing jurisdiction or creates binding obligations.

EXPENDITURE EXPLANATION

There is no anticipated direct material effect on governmental expenditures as a result of this measure.

The proposed law’s requirement for notice to the governor and the Attorney General (AG) of any notice, claim, or demand made by a federal agency or staff, agent, or official of the federal government, or any party in litigation which seeks to impose continuing federal court jurisdiction from any state department, agency, board or commission, state official or employee, or any other state institution, or local political subdivision (within 30 days of receipt of the notice from the federal government or any party in litigation which seeks to impose continuing federal court jurisdiction) would involve nominal expenditures that would not arise to the level of any significant fiscal impact.

Moreover, the proposed law’s provision allowing the AG to hire special counsel to institute suits in the name of the state or defend suits that implicate the state in matters that involve continuing federal jurisdiction is within the authority already granted to the Attorney General. To the extent that the AG utilizes this existing authority to intervene in any additional litigation involving any additional state entities or local political subdivisions, the AG may incur additional expenditures, which are not quantifiable.

REVENUE EXPLANATION

There is no anticipated direct material effect on governmental revenues as a result of this measure.
